FRIDAY, JULY 3, 1903.

The average daily circulation of the Barre Daily Times for the week ending Saturday was

2,652

A Thousand A Day

The Daily Times

is the only daily in Washington County that publishes its circulation so that all readers and advertisers may know what it is.

Do you have an advertisement in it?

It will be only 127 years ago tomorrow that the Continental Congress adopted the Declaration of Independence. Our national existence does not date back a great many years after all.

With the beginning of the college year next fall Middlebury college will try the experiment of the segregation of the female students of that institution. This appears to be imposing a terrible hardship on someone.

In addition to the fact that tomorrow is Independence Day, the day is otherwise notable in that three presidents of the United States died on the fourth of this month. The presidents were Jefferson, Adams and Monroe. The day might well be a memorial day for those men who did so much for this country during the formative period of its history.

Events of yesterday at Ballyshannon, Ireland, demonstrated pretty conclusively that Americans are not in it with some others when it comes to pushing automobiles around a 270 mile course. There is one thing at least in which we shall have to take a back seat, but not for long if the usual American aspirations are there. To be first is an American ideal, no matter in what line.

The Waterbury Record comes out with the following sensible advice which is applicable generally: "If everyone works for the best interest of the town—it makes a strong pulling team. This can be accomplished in many ways. By encouraging new industries is one and doing your part toward securing more, is a sensible way to build up any town. Don't be a mule and kick if someone else is prospering."

The base ball league which takes in the cities of Burlington, Rutland, St. Albans and Plattsburg has started out most auspiciously so far as interest in the game, good financial backing and excellent base ball are concerned. The Northern league bids fair to have a successful season. The organization with only four clubs is small enough so that it should be compact, and not unwieldy as is very often the case with a semi-professional league. If the experiment proves to be successful, that is, if the season ends without a big deficit, the Barre base ball enthusiasts may be tempted to apply for admission into the organization by another season. Barre is a good town for sports, and membership in such a league would be acceptable to a large number of people here who are interested in the national game. The experiment of six years ago was a costly one in this city, but if the present Northern league ends its season well Barre may want to join next year.

Windsor is the post-office address of the largest summer colony of authors and artists in America. Mansfield Parish, Frederic Remington, Norman Hapgood, Louis Evan Shipman, John Blair and Mr. Dooley, and there are several others. No publisher has his summer home in Windsor.

The villages of Pownal Center and East Pownal are in a ferment over the refusal of the school board to allow the Methodist society of the first village the use of the school building in which to hold services Sunday afternoon. The church is being repaired, and last week permission was asked to be allowed the use of the school building. No objection was made at that time, but late Saturday evening the church board was notified that it could not have the building the next day. The town hall was finally secured and services were held there.

Members of the Vermont Fish and Game League who have been investigating the fish and game situation relative to fall shooting report that owing to the protracted wet weather ruffed grouse, woodcock, and, in fact, all game birds, will be scarce next season than since 1892. The investigators have found that many broods of grouse have died in the nest and that in several sections the eggs have failed to hatch. The few birds that have managed to survive have failed to develop properly, and are scrawny and undersized. In several instances old birds as well as young have succumbed, and one was found dead on her nest of eggs. Mature woodcocks have thrived in spite of the cold and rain, but the young birds have nearly all died. Indications of second nestings were discovered on the higher lands, but there is little hope the eggs will hatch unless a hot dry spell follows the rain.
